Just throwing it out there, we should plan on a 2nd wave arriving in DC if this 10 bullshit begins in order to reinforce the pede army who will be leaving on the 7th.

Just thought of this in case Cruz's 10 day long "election fraud committee," which is totally theatre to appease us, somehow finds an excuse to let Biden win.

Obviously we'll cross this bridge when we get there and nail down more plans as needed but something to think about for the pedes who can't make it this week.

11 If we're still occupying D.C. on the 15th, I'm there...I'm part of the second, and final wave.

11 Why is anyone leaving on the 7th or do you think 1 march and all this just goes away???

Anyone leaving before saving the country from fucking Communism is a fuckkng traitor period

10 days or 10 years we should all be in this till we either win or die trying... anything less is just a LARP

3 I appreciate you. I am just telling you what most are planning. People would be more likely to go all in if they felt we would win, and they would not be alone, but too many people feel as if they are fighting a losing battle. If this has all been game-planned, it has been done so on a razor-thin margin. The left is boiling the frog, by nature of this, many patriotic Americans don't understand the severity of the situation, and many people have families and jobs that they don't think they can risk losing by being overly extreme. Trump, by playing all his cards close to the vest; the art of war, look weak when you are strong, etc it naturally empowers your enemy (the desired outcome, creating dangerous overconfidence), but it has the natural effect of demoralizing casual and even extremely engaged supporting observers. I am very engaged, but I am feeling as if we have mostly gotten our asses kicked for four years. Many people that will be there on the 6th have been rallying next to me for consecutive weeks since November 3rd. many were working the whole 4 years for Trump. Putting in hours fighting. Some are coming from miles away, after long bouts of economic pain, etc. Many are 50+. Many have kids. Etc. At some of these rallies become futile. If they extend the 6th to the 16th, this one will feel like a hollow victory, of being decisive. We must be careful they don't delay and drain the pressure.

5 I hope at least a million and more show up on 6th. Trump is very much counting on this.

4 Trump needs to ignore the commission. His bombs on the 6th should be enough to win on that day.

▼ He better not fall for the commission.. contact Trump to ignore it and contact Ted to drop it.

3 Probably need to keep this up indefinitely. Because if B gets in office, the war will start. And we need to be ready.

3 I think its cute to think there will be any buildings left in DC on the 7th if they let the fraud stand

2 People will leave when/if they run out of supplies. If we keep supplies coming in...

▼ I mean a lot of wives or supporting family members can make trips to bring more essentials and then head back home.

2 Or we just take it on the 6th. Get the gallows ready for transport. Set them up in front of Congress and work.

the 2 hour debate window, the proceedings will carry on to the early hours of the 7th unless they call it a night.

4 ▼ They will call it a night at 10 pm and then by some incredible event a select few will come in and "uncontest" everything at 3 am.

1 ▼ Gotta. I'm lamenting the same thought. We need to get ready. Ted cruz, that fucker. Postponing the inevitable. Screw, cooler heads will prevail. I want justice.

-1 ▼ Yes, and then the 4th of March is another alleged extension date someone claims the 12 amendwoment allows for. I expect them to take every opportunity to wear us out.
